Woman's Experience Who Gave All to Children.

SUPREME COURT DECISION

Her Property Not to Be Retured to Her, but She is Entitled to Support According to Her Deed of Gift.

ne, from the Circuit Court of Bland ty, the opinion of the court is writ-by Judge Harrison, and reversed decree of the Circuit Court and re-ds the cause for further proceedings had therein not in conflict with

This is an interesting case involving to not unusual experience of a person ho devises property to a relative with a condition that the grantor shall have comfortable home with the granter. In is case Melvina Cubine, conveyed to her uighter, Rhoda Cubine, two lots and a uise, in Bland county, in consideration love and affection, and with the proso that the grantor shall have a proper id comfortable home with the grantor or the remainder of her (the grantor's) e. The daughter afterwards married sister, the appellant in the case, and gether they took possession of the emises the grantor remaining and abidgivith them.

Contrary to the fairy story denoument, Contrary to the fairy story denoument, they did not live togother happly ever afterwards, but for a term of seven years, when Rhoda Cubine Keister, the grantee, died leaving two infant children, who with the husband are the appellants

WOULDN'T SUPPORT HER. WOULDN'T SUPPORT HER.

After the death of his wife Rhoda Relater refused longer to furnish Melvina Cubine, the granter, a home and support, became abusive and compelled her to abandon the home and seek shelter elsewhere. Melvina Cubine, the appelies in the case, then filed a bill alleging that the consider notaortfeh brdium ing that the consideration for the conveyance had failed and praying that the deed be annulled and set axide, and that ing that the consideration for the conveyance had failed and praying that the deed be annulled and set aside, and that she be restored to her original rights in the property; or if not entitled to this relief that the property be sold and proceeds applied to her support and maintenance. The Circuit Court on this hearing resoluted and annulled the deed, restored the grantor to her rights and awarded a writ to place her in immediate and full possession. From this decree the infant children of grantee appealed. The appellate court does not adhere to the rule that in every case of conveyance in consideration of maintenance and support where the consideration falls rescission follows. The appellate court takes the ground that relief is afforded in a court of equity, according to the merits of the case. The power of a court of equity to rescind the contract includes the power to afford less drastic relief, if the latter course be more consistent with justice

NEITHER IN DEFAULT.

In this case neither the grantor nor those claiming under her are in default. The grantee died after faithfully porforming her part of the contract during life. Her title devolved upon her infant children, who are not capable of performing the contract during their grandmother's lifetime. The fault is that of the father, who is not a party to the deed and assumed no obligations under it. His default should not be allowed to prejudice the infant children in their rights. The deed makes no provision for the event of the grantee's death before complete performance of contract. All that remains to the grantor, Melvina Cubine, is the material support provided for by the deed. The grantor comes into a court of equity for relief. She is entitled to the support provided for by the deed, but not to a reselssion of the contract and entire restoration of the property to her use. The right of the grantor is above all other claims and when the value of that support has been ascertained a sale of the property will be necessary and a consumption of the corpus required to satisfy the demand. On the other hand something may be left for the infant children of the grantee, which the court must greserve and protect for their benefit. The larger part of the improvements placed after the institution of this NEITHER IN DEFAULT. were placed after the institution of this suit and could not have been made under the belief that the appellants had a good title, but with full knowledge that the title was in actual dispute and litigation. For these reasons the decree appealed from is reversed and the cause remanded for further proceedings.

Robinet vs. Mitchell.

In the case of James Robinett's adminis-trior vs. T. E. Mitchell and wife et als, the opinion of the court is written by Judge Whittie and affirms the decrees of the Circuit Court of Bland county. The appeal in the case is from two decisions of the Circuit Court of the county aforemaid, one at the May term, 1902, establishing certain demands on behalf of appellees against the estate of James Robinett, deceased, and the second at the November term of that year, dismissing petition of appellant for a rehearing of the former decree, These claims are evidenced by a personal decree which was rendered December 28, 1886, in favor of appellees against James Robinett and Harvey R. Mustard, joint executors of the Circuit Court of Bland county, The

The contention of the appellant that the decree of appellees if not void was nevertheless barred by the statute of limitations is not sustained by the court. The court holds that a voidable judgment, until set aside in a proper proceeding for that purpose, possesses all the attributes of a valid judgment.

An accounting of the outstanding indebtedness of the estate was ordered October 1, 1801, which suspended the running of the statute of limitations to all creditors whose dymands were thereon. Numerous authorities for this position are quoted.

It is an agreed fact that the decree of December 2, 1896 wa sentered against James Robinett after his death and aspellant insists that lit was therefore void and should have been so declared by the Circuit Court. The Appellate Court holds that where a court of general jurisdiction removes, is effective unless and until set aside and may not be collaterally attacked.

This is a case in which the appelless in this case asked and were granted an injunction, which was perpetuated by dedecree of the Circuit Court, restraining the appellants from diverting from the lands of the St. John's a certain small stream which flowed in a zig-zag direction upon first one farm and then the other, twice entering the St. John tract. John, but was diverted thereon many years ago by means of a ditch, with the permission of the elder Leonards. Recent permission of the elder Leonards. Recent, ly the Leonards dug a ditch which would have diverted the water from the St. John land, but the erection of a dam. The dam was built and served the purpose for a long time, but was subsequently removed. The question of fact involved is as to whether the stream originally and naturally flowed upon the St. John land or was diverted thereupon by the consent of the predecesors of the eLonards on the land. The preponderance of testimony sustains the claim or the Leonards that the water of the stream naturally ran upon their land and was not diverted thereupon by consent of Leonard, which consent might be revoked at any time.

that grant is founded includes 2,22 acres of prior claims, which are expressly reserved and excepted from the grant. There are two controlling questions presented for decision, viz:

(1) As to the admissibility as evidence of a land office copy of the patent under which the plaintiff claim, the objection to its admissibility being that it does not show that the lesser seal of the Commonwealth had ever been attached to the original patent.

(2) Upon whom the burden of proof senior patent, The Circuit Court decided both questions The Circuit court described favorably to plaintiffs. The appellate court as reviewing the practice of the courts and land office for many years holds that there was me error in the ruling of the trial court in admitting the office copy of the patent in question as claimed by them was a part of the excepted lands.

Further on, the court lays down this dictum: "This may be a very inconvenient rule for plaintiffs in action of ejectment, but the logic of it is inexerable. They the plaintiffs, are the actors, and maintain that the defendants are in possession of their land; it involves no hardship, therefore to require them to make good that assertion by proof as a condition precedent to the right of recovery."

Other assignment of error are sub-sidiary and dependent upon the decis-ions of the questions already disposed and detailed discussion of them is not and detailed discussions therefore necessary.

It follows that the judgment of the Circuit Court of Wise county must be reversed and the cause remanded for a Kesterson vs. Hill.

In the cause of Kesteron's administrator vs. Hill the opinion of the court, written by Judge Harrison, reverses the judgment of the Circuit Court of Lee county, from which the appeal comes. The Sontrolling question involved Sn. the case is that raised by the assignment of error to the action of the court in not sustaining the defence of the statute of limitations as to the claim asserted by the appellee.

of limitations as to the claim asserted by the appellee.

J. B. Hill, the appellee, brought this suit in the nature of a creditor's bill, against C. R. Kesterson, administrator of J. M. Wheeler, Sr., to enforce payment of a bond dated May 1st, 1838, and payable one day after date for the sum of $391. The Appellate Court holds that bond was payable one day after date and was, therefore, due and demandable at the time of the obliger's death; but no steps having been taken for its collection until March, 1838, nearly seven years, it was clearly barred by the express terms of section 2,000 of the code. The appellee, however, contends that his right of action is saved by section 2,933 of the code, which is quoted.

however, contends that his flag to the code, which is avoted.

The Appellate Court holds that the statute of limitations applies in the cass and that the debt is, therefore, not collectible. In this the contention of the appellate that section 2,33 is applicable in the case does not apply. The right to set up a bar of a statute of limitations as a defence to a cause of action, after the statute has run, is held to be a vested right, and cannot be taken away by legislation, either by a repeal of the statute, without saving clause, or by an affirmative act. Numerous text writers are quoted to sustain this position.

The further contention of the appellate that the bar of the statute is repelled by a subsequent acknowledgment and promise to pay the dobt, made by the administrator within the statutory perfor, is held by the court to be untenable.

Finally the court holds and declares that the debt asserted by the appellate, J. B. Hill, against the estate of J. M. Wheeler, Sr., deceased, is barred by the statute of limitations and that the decrees in this cause so far as they undertake to establish such claims as a valid and subsisting debt, must be reversed and set aside and the cause remanded. WANT MORE MEMBERS

San Francisco, Sept. 8, 1903. To Owens & Minor Drug Co.:

Dear Sirs,-There are dally occurrences in this city that ought to be known all over the word. A guileless old gentleman, an octogenarian, a distant relative of Robert Fulton of first steamship fame, has saved the lives of hundreds (probably thousands) after they were believed to be beyond human aid. His discovery is un-ing of the trial court in admitting the office copy of the patent in question as to the burden of proof in the case in point in favor of the defendant, requiring the plaintiff to establish title to the ind. In taking this position, which reverses the trial court, the higher court holds: The action of electment does not involve a comparison of title, but the law, in its wisdom, has seen fit, to impose a plaintiff, who seeks fo recover possession of land from another, the burden of recovering upon the strength of his own title and not upon the weakness of the title of his adversary and to prove the title which he asserts.

THE CASE STATED.

The court thus states the case submitted to the jury concretely in the following language:
The plaintiffs introduced a funior patent, connected themselves with it and containing an exception of 2.203 acres, and proved that the defendants introduced a senior patent for 2.000 acres of land, containing an exception of 2.223 acres, and proved that the land in controversy was within the exterior bounds of their patent, and rested.

The question is in that state of proofs, who was entitled to prevail? Manifest. Bright's Disease and Diabetes, .

This is not easy of belief and it is the purpose of a number of business and professional men of this city (of whom I am one) to tell the people. You are hereby authorized to tell all those in your city who have either Bright's Disease or Diabetes that nearly nine-tentils of them can recover. Among the business men who are giving moral and financial support and who would give neither if the above was not strictly true, are Hon. D. M. Burns, President Candelaria Mining Company; Edward Mills, President Bullock & Jones Company; Capitain Roberts, President Boca and Loyalton R. R. Co.; Thos Kirknatrick, Capitalist; D. E. Bender. Capitalist; W. C. Price, Capitalist; W. Capitalist, and many others. The pamphlets herewith are to be given to all inquirers without charge. They give the complete history of our long and exhaustive investigation.

Ity, the defendants were, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the presumptions is that their possession was a lawful possession. The law never presume a trespass! The trial court should have declared in enfect that the burden was upon the plaintiffs to show that the land claimed by them was a part of the excepted lands.
